A comment on the proposed settlement -

I personally firmly think that the Government is being far to soft on Microsoft. That company has done more from it's position of power to limit growth in the PC industry and slow (or stop) the introduction of innovative, better, technology solutions then anyone can ever imagine ... even with what's come out in the trial. No one company should be in such a position, not to mention that the industry, the US economy, and my shares of MS stock would be far better off if they were broken up into several businesses.
